ANOTHER LIVELY DAY

In Judge Snell's Court--Dickson's Cross-Examination.

Leading Questions by Counsel Wells, Which Led to Quarrel Scenes.

Dickson's Recital of His Attempt to Have Bowen Arrested.

How the Judge Will Probably Decide-A Long List of Witnesses,

The hearing in the Dickson case was resumed in the police court Friday. In answer to an inquiry from Judge Cuppy, the court said he did not regard as admissible testimony relating to the general conduct of affairs in the Jury room. It would not be pertinent unless it concerned this particular case. The cross examination of Mr. Dickson was then resumed.

Mr. Wells: In conversation with the jurors on Four-and-a-half street, did you say that you believed Bowen's purpose was not to bribe you but to find out how you was going to vote?—Answer. Not as stated by you, sir. I stated in general terms that Bowen must have imagined that he was treating a knave or a fool.

Question. You told Bowen that you had studiously refeating from conversing with studiously refrained from conversing with any one about the trial?-A. Not in that form.

Question. Did you ever talk to any one about the trial during its progress?—A. About the merits of the case, no; about incidents of the trial, yes. I may have said that Ingersoll was an eloquent man; that Merrick had shown great ability, and Judge Wylle much patience.

soli was an eroquent man; that Merrice had patience.

Referring to his conversation with Kenaedy, witness said that on the morning of June 27 Judge Wylle had severely condemned the prosecution for their conduct of the case and for their failure to put in sufficient evidence. Speaking to Kirby about that day's proceedings, witness said he believed that Judge Wylle would take the case from the jury. In conversation with Mr. Smith, witness said the trial was stretching along to an interminable length; that it was being falked to death. Also talked about it with his brother and with Stilson Hutchins. McBlair and Wallace Kirby had talked to witness about it. Kennedy frequently alluded to the case, but witness generally remained silent. Never spoke about it to Brady's brother nor to Col. McKibben. Did not in conversation with William Russell, in Clarence M. Barton's presence, say that "the two niggars in the jury were school teachers." Said something of that kind to a reporter who asked him about the occupation of the jurors.

Mr. Wells. Did you go on an excursion down the river with Douglass, of the Capital, with Brady, of the Critic, and McKibbin?

A. They may have been on the boat; they were not of my party."

Question. "Was there not a good deal of drunkenness among your party?" asked Mr. Wells.

"Not that I remember," said the witness.

Wells.

"Not that I remember," said the witness.

"Did you not so drink with McKibbin, Brady, and others that you had to be carried away?" asked Mr. Wells.

The witness (angrily). "As insulting as your inquiry is, I answer you emphatically 'no, sir!" Now, sir, I don't propose to stand here and be insulted, whether in court or not." This decided answer created somewhat of a sensation. Messrs, Wells and Smith indulged in some personal remarks. Mr. Wells, addressing the court, said, "I stood here and had my witness asked as severe questions as had my witness asked as severe questions as have been asked Mr. Dickson. If he had an-have been asked Mr. Dickson. If he had answered them as Dickson has answered me, he should have been put in jail."

The court, "I don't think it is proper for either of you (referring to Messrs. Wells and Smith) to talk to one another that way. I must have order."

Mr. Wells then referred to the meeting at Mr. Ingersoll's house, on October 1, when the addidavits were prepared. In answer to his question, the witness denied that he took any part in the preparation of those addidavits other than to furnish Mr. Ingersoll, at his request, with a written copy of his statement. Relative to the Ingersoll interview, published in the Post, about the middle of October, witness said he learned that it would contain govere reflections upon Mr. Merrick, and at his request, and upon his representation that it request, and upon his representation that it would work great injustice to Mr. Merrick, they were expurged. "I returned good for evil," said the witness. Mr. Wells asked the witness if he had taken any part in the preparation of the Foote affidavit, but objec-tion was made. The court said: We are trying the defendant for reading certain papers in the jury om and I hardly-see how the question tends to show that.

Mr. Wells. We are trying two issues here:

first, Dickson, for reading that paper; second, Mr. Dickson as a witness. He can answer or not as he pleases. Witness denied in the most positive terms that any of the defendants in the star route case were interested in the electric light company, of which witness is secretary.

This concluded the cross-examination, and the witness made a statement showing the difficulties which had been thrown in his way to prevent him from obtaining a vindication. He was about to read a letter from the district He was about to read a letter from the district attorney in this connection when the court interrupted and said: I want to say that some time ago I told my clerk that if Mr. Dickson or any one else applied for a warrant for Bowen's arrest to grant it at any time, and those instructions still hold good. I don't want you to think you could not secure justice here. The court is open to all the citizens of the district.

Judge Cuppy. We don't mean that; we have a right to show where he did apply.

Mr. Wells. No; for you may have applied to a priest—to a priest—

Mr. Dickson (striking the bar with his clenched hands). The doors of justice have been closed in my behalf, and open to the wretch who stood upon this stand. Mr. Wells (sarca stically), Which one?-A

Mr. Wells (sarcs stically). Which one?—A Henry A. Bowen.

The court I may save some time and trouble by saying at this time that I may assume Mr. Dickson's statement to be true, and shall dispose of the case in that view. In other words, I am going to place the responsibility for my action in disposing of this case diptin the occurrences in the jury room. I am adostantially inclined to believe that Dickson's story in regard to the interview on the 23d is probably true. I am not going to say that either is true, however, but let them stand side by side. I am going to base my action on the matters that transpired in the jury room. I cannot go beyond the information that Dickson improperly read a paper in the jury room.

jury room. jury roam.

Mr. Cuppy. The government claim that the papers was a fletitious account. Do I understand your honor to say that you do not believe Bowen when he says the subject matter of the paper is false, for that is a very material taing? It would indicate a corrupt purpose on the part of Dickson.

The court That question I don't propose to

The court. That question I don't propose to say anything about at present. There are a great many points I intend to discuss if I ever get to them.

Judge Cuppy. Well, I notify your honor

Judge Cuppy. Well, I notify your honor that we are going to support the truth of Mr. Dickson's story in every particular. His subsequent conduct throws much light upon it. His going to Judge Wylle—that is not the set of a man who has a corrupt purpose.

The witness was then further examined by Judge Cuppy. He gave as his reason for voting as he did that, "while I thought those men were morally guilty, legally they had failed to prove it." The witness repeated the statements made by other jarors regarding the approaches made by them. He said several attempts were made by the ather jarors to induce him to change his vote. "MeNelly made a very interesting argument—very interesting. He took me aside and said "——Mr. Wells objected at this point.

Mr. Smith said it might come out that McNelly had endeavored to improperly influence the witness. He wanted it all to come out. The court however decided to rule out the interesting the second of the statement.

The court however decided to rule out the statement in the form it was made.

The winness and McNelly read from St. Paul's espisitles to the Corinthians.

Mr. Smith. Didn't he claim to be inspired? Wells, I object; perhaps he Guiteau.

Mr. Smith. He was a second Guiteau; he claimed to be inspired in that case, and quoted from the scriptures in support of his argu-from the scriptures in support of his arguments.

A stormy discussion followed this assertion and subsequent questions of the same character put by Mr. Smith. Mr. Smith passionately declared that this man (McNelly), half crank, half idiot, had been used as a tool by semebody. It was with great difficulty, and only by threatening to fine counsel, that the court maintained order.

When order was restored, Mr. Wells asked the witness: Did you ever make any application to me for the arrest of Bowen?—A. I did to your superior officer, not to you. I did not regard your appointment as valid.

Witness said he had written to the attorney general in reference to the matter, and exgeneral in reference to the matter, and ex-sibited a receipt for the letter signed by Mr.

Ker. Mr. Wells asked witness why he did not offer to assist him after his appointment as special counsel? Witness answered—to be frank with you, I did not believe you were rightfully appointed. I know you was appointed to make a special report that would reflect upon my integrity as a man.

Mr. Wells (hotty). How did you know that?

—A. I judged so from my knowledge of the man. Mr. Wells, Do you swear to that? How do you know that?

Mr. Wells. Do you swear to that? How do you know that?

The courf suppressed the threatening storm with considerable difficulty, saying it was plain that the witness meant to say that he did not believe that Mr. Wells entertained a kindly feeling towards him, and that he distrusted the gentleman.

Mr. Wells explained that he never had a harsh feeling towards Dickson before the beginning of the investigation.

The court then adjourned until to-day.

Mr. Dickson has made out the following list of witnesses who will be summond to appear for the defense: Attorney General Brewster, Thomas S. Jones and Harry V. Seymour, of Buffalo, N. Y.; R. T. Land Grant Rathways. Another bill has been matured and reported, to compel railway compaties to pay taxes on lands granted by the government. This bill comes from the senate committee on public lands and was reported yesterday morning by Senator Van Wyek. It provides that the lands for which the companies are entitled to patents on payment of the expense of surveying, and yet refuse to take out patents, shall within one year after the time at which the companies were or shall be antitled to retain within one year after the time at which the companies were or shall be entitled to patents, be forfeited to the United States and become part of the public domain the same as if never granted. The bill also relinquishes the title of the government in favor of states, countres, or municipalities which have sold or shall sell unpatented railway lands for non-payment of taxes. A senator interested in this proposed legislation says the companies principally affected by this measure are the Union Central and Kansas Pacific, and that the amount of lands involved approximates fifteen millions acres located in Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Nevada, and California. The senator also said that he thought congress was awakening to a realization of the great importance of this subject to the agricultural and other local interests of the west.
